[EXCERPTS]

Narrator: March 20, 1949. The Aroostook County Train travels northbound through the woods of Maine. Inside, there are four passengers headed towards their final stop, Madawaska.

Rose Yung: I, uh, don't know how to tell you this, but Stella's been missing.

Skiff Ruffman: So you're, so what you're saying is you're not too upset about just possibly leaving this poor man under this rubble.

Krzysztof Dabrowski: Someone is going to be murdered for gambling debts.

Narrator: You can't seem to feel anything and you can't move any of your limbs.

Rose Yung: Exquisite.

Krzysztof Dabrowski: There are inscriptions for a ritual.

Ines De LaBouche: As a lover of caves, I do not feel the same way.

Rose Yung: I feel fucked up.

Skiff Ruffman: Guys! Did you see that?!

[ROSE LAUGHS]

Krzysztof Dabrowski: Does anyone have any yellow?

Ines De LaBouche: Maybe I'll get inspired about life again.

Narrator (as Phil Cyr): Whoa, f-fellas, fellas, I love cats too.

Krzysztof Dabrowski: Oh look, we did his to-do list today.

Ines De LaBouche: What was he talking about with the um, spicy food?

Skiff Ruffman: I grab him by the lapels and I say, "Snap out of it man, snap out it!"

Krzysztof Dabrowski (Screaming): Help!

Ines De LaBouche: I do not like any of this that I have found.

Krzysztof Dabrowski: What do you mean, most of him?

Skiff Ruffman: And then just a hand creeps in between the both of them, and on top of it perched an oyster.
